Dear Art:

In addition to my other responsibilities with CIA, I serve as a member of the Board of Editors of the "Studies in Intelligence." This is a quarterly publication on the methodology of intelligence collection and analysis which is published for the Community as a whole by CIA. As you might imagine, I am charged with drumming up articles on the scientific and technical front.

Some time back I talked with General Pierce and suggested that FTD, as a major component in the technical intelligence community, might prepare a number of papers on programs for which they carry the principal responsibilities.

The purpose of this letter is to reestablish our interest in an FTD article on the NANCY RAE Program. If I can encourage you in this venture further, or be helpful in indicating the format or context, please let me know. I do believe that it would be a substantial contribution to the literature to have an authoritative treatment of this important collection system.

USAF review(s)
completed.

Sincerely,

[Redacted Signature]
